Now, I have to detect whether the packet was sent in the broadcast domain or not. How can I do it? A: You can't do that directly from a captured packet. The ethernet header contains a Source MAC address. You can't determine a destination MAC address from a captured ethernet frame. You can, however, get the Ethernet header from the captured packet, and see whether the destination Ethernet address is ff:ff:ff:ff:ff:ff or multicast address ff:ff:ff:ff:ff:ff. If the Ethernet header says that it is a broadcast packet, you can check the broadcast flag. [Concordance of the Anti-CSC3 test and the human papillomav
